TEAM MEETING

CONVERSATION

Tom: Morning, everyone. Let's dive in. First on the agenda — the new product launch. Liam mentioned in the conference call yesterday that a few teams are falling behind.

Liam: Yeah, the prototype review deadline might need to be moved forward a week.

Tom: That's what I figured. Sara, is the marketing strategy on the flip chart in the conference room still up to date?

Sara: I double-checked this morning. It includes the latest updates, but the social media plan still needs a few tweaks.

Liam: And just to flag, the design team reported delays with a couple of components, so we'll likely need to rework the rollout schedule.

Tom: Got it. Has anyone updated the attendance sheet from yesterday's call?

Mary: I did — right after the meeting. Everyone who was supposed to join did, except the logistics team.

Liam: They told me they'll be caught up by tomorrow, so no major impact.

Tom: Good. Now, on last week's action items — Sara, the press release draft has been approved, right?

Sara: Correct. PR (public relationship) signed off on it this morning..

Tom: Perfect. So here's what we need: lock down the timeline, confirm prototype delivery, and make sure everyone has access to the updated marketing strategy.

Mary: Got it. Oh, and just a heads-up: some clients are expecting a demo of the new product before the end of the month. We'll need to schedule that.

Sara: I'll note it in the minutes and circulate them after this session.

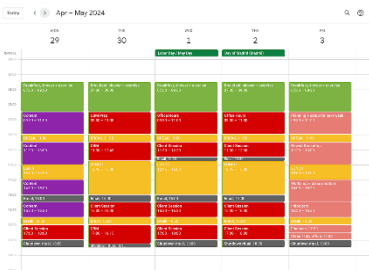

Tom: Great. That should keep everyone on the same page.
