GOALS

CONVERSATION

Nina: I keep saying I'll set up goals, but honestly, I never stick to them.

Samuel: Yeah, it's tough. What works for me is writing them down. That way they don't just stay in my head.

Nina: I've done that, but the list ends up feeling too long.

Samuel: Then just cut it down to a couple of key goals. Way more doable.

Nina: Hm, I like that idea. But even then, I usually forget about them after a while.

Samuel: I get that. I check on my goals every few days. That way, I don't lose track of what I need to do.

Nina: That sounds useful. But I still struggle to see progress.

Samuel: That's why I break big goals down into smaller steps. It's easier to see that you're actually moving forward instead of staring at one huge task.

Nina: Makes sense. I just worry about falling behind.

Samuel: That happens. The trick is to stick to the plan. When you look back on the month, you'll see progress—even if it's not perfect.

Nina: You make it sound doable. Alright, I'll give it another shot.
