CONVERSATION

Lauren: Wow... finally a bit of peace. We'd been dealing with that performance mess for so long that I almost forgot what a normal day feels like.

Jordan: Honestly, same. Our click-through rate (CTR) had been dropping forever, and every fix we tried kept failing. It was getting ridiculous.

Lauren: And the return on ad spend (ROAS) situation... we'd been pouring money into those ads without seeing any improvement. It felt endless.

Jordan: On the top of that, the leads we had been getting were terrible. Completely unqualified. That's why our customer acquisition cost (CAC) had been climbing nonstop.

Lauren: Yeah, and sales had been chasing prospects blindly because we didn't have any proper filtering. They'd been wasting time every single day.

Jordan: And the creative team had been rewriting the value proposition over and over. They must've gone through ten versions before this one finally worked.

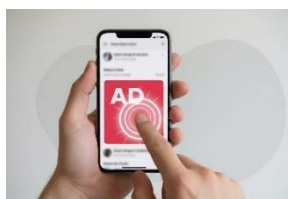

Lauren: Don't forget the marketing touchpoints/channels. We'd been relying on places that weren't delivering anything. Just a lot of noise. We kept pushing them because we didn't have better options.

Jordan: Well... looks like the turnaround finally happened. CTR is coming back up, CAC is stabilizing, and the leads from today actually look like real prospects.

Lauren: Good. Because this is exactly what we'd been trying to fix for ages.
