MOTORWAY TRAGEDY

Teacher's note: get 6 pieces of paper, number them from 1 to 6 and have each student draw one to see which character they will be.

A yellow car crashes into a red van in front of it and is almost sandwiched by a truck coming from behind. The yellow car driver is extremely injured and unconscious. He has no insurance. The yellow car passenger had minor bruises. A police officer will take the statements of the 5 people below — discover whose fault the accident was.

1. Witness 1: you are a service station attendant, 25. You had just filled the red van up. You were at the gas pump, less than 200 meters from the accident site. You think the truck driver is at fault.
2. Witness 2: you are 79. You live in a flat that overlooks the motorway. As you had nothing to do that day (the cable TV was not working), you had been watching the traffic since early in the morning. You have never spoken to Witness 1 but you say that the truck driver is definitely not to blame. You describe the accident in great detail. You have the attitude of: 'I knew this would happen someday.'
3. Truck driver: you are 42. You were just behind the yellow car. According to Witness 1, you were to blame for the accident. You claim that you actually avoided causing a bigger accident. You managed to come to a full stop just short of crashing into the yellow car and the red van.
4. Yellow car passenger: you are a 30-year-old peddler who was given a ride by the yellow car driver 20 minutes before the accident. You say that the Truck driver was driving too close and forced the yellow car driver to speed up, causing the accident. You first say that you peddle clothes, then you say it's kitchenware, then it's shoes.
5. Red van driver: you are 31. You say you had to pull over just after leaving the service station because you had a flat tire. You were on the soft shoulder, and the yellow car came out of nowhere and crashed. You were driving without a license. The car is not registered to you. You seem a bit too nervous for someone who, as you claim, is not to blame at all.
6. Police officer: you are 38. You must control the situation; cool tempers down; call for an ambulance; see the evidence; write down and compare witnesses' statements; check documents, insurances, etc.

COMPOSITION

Write about something related to transportation — e.g.: a lack of buses in your city, a dangerous intersection in your neighborhood, air pollution caused by cars, or a car accident you were involved in, etc.
