PERFORMANCE REVIEW – RESULTS, FEEDBACK & DECISIONS

Prepare 8 pieces of paper numbered from 1 to 8 and have each student draw one to discover their character.

This activity focuses on giving and receiving feedback, performance language, accountability, and decision-making.

It's Friday afternoon at LogiSmart Brasil S.A., São Paulo.

The leadership team is reviewing Q2 performance results after a challenging quarter.

Some targets were met, others were missed, and pressure is growing for Q3.

The CEO expects clear explanations and concrete adjustments.

This meeting will define priorities, responsibilities, and expectations for the next quarter.

Performance Data

Area	Q2 Result	Target	Status
Revenue growth	+6%	+8%	Below target
On-time delivery	91%	95%	Below target
Operational costs	+12%	+8%	Above target
Client satisfaction (NPS)	62	70	Below target
Employee turnover	9%	≤6%	Above target

Student Coaching – How to Use the Data

- Use the numbers to justify praise or criticism
- Connect results to behaviors and decisions
- Propose specific improvements, not general ideas
- Balance feedback: results and people

Characters

1. Lucas – Operations Manager

"I'm responsible for results, whether they're good or bad.

Looking at these numbers, I know we didn't deliver what was expected.

At the same time, I see effort and progress in some areas.

This review can't be emotional — it needs to be honest and useful.

My goal is to leave this room with clarity, not excuses."

2. Mariana – Senior Analyst

“I worked hard this quarter, and I want that to be recognized. Still, I know some targets weren’t met, and that worries me.

I’m open to feedback, but I don’t want vague criticism. If there’s a problem, I want to know exactly what to fix.

This meeting matters for my growth.”

3. Diego – Team Supervisor

“I’m close to the team, and I see what happens day to day.

Targets were aggressive, and resources were limited.

I believe some results reflect poor planning, not poor performance.

I’m ready to defend my team, but I also know improvements are needed. I won’t accept unfair blame.”

4. Sofia – HR Business Partner

“I focus on people, not just numbers. Turnover and motivation are warning signs for me.

If performance drops, we need to ask why — not just demand more.

This is a moment to align expectations and support development.

Feedback must be firm, but respectful.”

5. Carla – Finance Manager

“These numbers concern me. Costs went up faster than revenue, and that’s a problem.

Efficiency matters as much as growth.

I’m here to challenge decisions that impact financial sustainability.

If we don’t control costs now, Q3 will be worse.”

6. Rafael – Quality & Compliance Lead

“Quality issues don’t always show up in revenue charts, but they hurt later. Client satisfaction below target is not random.

Processes were rushed, and standards slipped.

I need this to be addressed clearly. Ignoring quality now creates bigger problems ahead.”

7. João – Sales Manager

“My team closed deals under tough conditions.

Revenue grew, but not as much as planned. Market pressure was real, and competition was aggressive. I don’t want sales to be blamed alone for missed targets.

This discussion must reflect reality, not assumptions.”

8. Ana – Executive Assistant / Meeting Recorder

“I’m here to document decisions, not opinions.

If this meeting ends without action points, it’s wasted time.

I’ll track commitments and deadlines.

At the end, everyone must know what’s expected for Q3.”
