

LISTENING

#02

1 - 🎧 You will hear a phone conversation between a young woman and a company representative. She is calling to ask about job opportunities. Listen carefully the first time for the general idea, and then listen again for details. After listening, answer the comprehension questions about the call.

Looking for a job.

1 - What is the name of the company the girl called about the job?

2 - Where did the applicant see the advertisement for the job?

3 - Is the company still hiring? What schedules do they have available?

4 - Are they hiring people full-time, part-time, or both?

5 - Does the applicant need to bring her résumé in person?

6 - Were there any signs during the phone call that suggest she has a good chance of getting the job?

7 - The company is looking for part-time staff to work at a café. Based on the call, what kinds of tasks or jobs do you think she would do there?

8 - True or False: The company is hiring people to work night shifts.

9 - Do you think the applicant matches what the employer is looking for? Why or why not?

10 - What are some possible reasons this job might not be a good fit for her after the interview?

11 - What are the working hours at this company?

READING COMPREHENSION

LOOKING FOR A JOB

After finishing college, Emily felt both excited and anxious about her future. She had moved back to her parents' house to save money, and every morning she sat at the kitchen table with her laptop, scrolling through job postings. The endless cycle of applications, automated rejection emails, and silence from companies was exhausting.

One Tuesday morning, while sipping her coffee, she saw a new posting: Marketing Assistant – Downtown Office. The job description matched her skills perfectly—social media management, copywriting, and event planning. Her heart raced as she thought, This could be the one.

Emily immediately updated her résumé and drafted a cover letter. Still, she wanted a second opinion. She called her friend Jason, who worked at a small marketing agency.

“Hey, Jason. Could you check my résumé before I send it? I feel like I’m not showing my best skills.”

“Of course,” Jason said warmly. “Send it over. And make sure you highlight your internship. You organized that whole campaign last summer—it’s strong experience.”

Encouraged, Emily made the edits and clicked submit. A week later, she opened her inbox and gasped—an interview invitation.

On the day of the interview, she wore a navy blazer and carried a folder with extra copies of her résumé. Arriving ten minutes early, she sat in the lobby, surrounded by sleek glass walls and modern décor. Her palms were sweaty, but she whispered to herself, I’m ready. I deserve this chance. For the first time in weeks, Emily felt hopeful.

Comprehension Questions

1. What challenges did Emily face during her job search?

2. Which job posting caught her attention, and why did it feel like a good match?

3. What specific advice did Jason give her about improving her résumé?

4. How did Emily prepare for her interview day?

5. What emotions did Emily experience while waiting in the lobby before the interview?
