READING COMPREHENSION

The Hotel Check-In

After a long flight, Daniel arrived at the Grand Regent Hotel in Paris. He was very tired and just wanted to rest. The hotel lobby looked beautiful, with shiny marble floors and a big chandelier. Soft piano music played in the background, making him feel a little better.

Daniel went to the reception desk.

“Good evening, sir. May I have your name and reservation, please?” asked the receptionist.

Daniel gave his passport and the booking email. The receptionist looked at the computer and said: “Mr. Lewis, your room is booked for tomorrow, not tonight.”

Daniel was shocked. He had made a mistake with the date. “Do you have any room available for tonight?” he asked.

The receptionist smiled. “Yes, we do. It is a bigger room, but we will give it to you for the same price as your original booking.”

Daniel felt very happy and relieved. Soon, he had his room key and heard: “Enjoy your stay, Mr. Lewis.” In the elevator, Daniel thought that sometimes problems can turn into good experiences when people are kind and helpful.
