Ordering Food

Jason was traveling on business and had just arrived at his hotel after a long day of meetings. Feeling tired and hungry, he decided to order room service instead of going out. He picked up the menu from the bedside table and looked through the options. There were a variety of choices, from pasta and burgers to vegetarian dishes and seafood.

After a few minutes, he called the room service line and placed his order. 'I'd like the grilled chicken with steamed vegetables and a bottle of sparkling water, please,' he said. The hotel staff confirmed his order and told him it would arrive in about 30 minutes.

While he waited, Jason turned on the TV and started watching a travel documentary. Exactly half an hour later, there was a knock on the door. A friendly server brought the tray into the room and made sure Jason had everything he needed, including utensils and napkins.

The food was hot and delicious. Jason left a tip for the server and sat by the window to enjoy his meal. He was glad he didn't have to leave the hotel after such a busy day. Ordering food from his room was not only convenient but also very comfortable.
