Scheduling a Medical Appointment

Last month, David started feeling pain in his back. At first, he thought it was just because of long hours at work. But after two weeks, the pain didn't go away. One morning, he decided it was time to see a doctor.

David called the clinic and spoke to the receptionist.

"Good morning, I would like to schedule an appointment with a doctor," he said.

The receptionist asked, "Do you prefer a general check-up or do you want to see a specialist?"

"I think a specialist would be better. I have had back pain for two weeks," David explained.

She checked the computer and replied, "We have an opening on Wednesday at 3 p.m. with Dr. Miller. Does that work for you?"

"Yes, that's perfect. Thank you," David answered with relief.

On Wednesday, David arrived at the clinic, checked in at the front desk, and waited. When he finally met Dr. Miller, he felt calm, knowing that he had taken the right step by scheduling the appointment.
