

LISTENING

#18

Part 1 – Listening: Planning the Morning in London Listen to a conversation between Rob and Jenny about their free morning in London. Answer the questions to understand what they plan to do, work interruptions, and meeting arrangements.

Free Morning

1 - What do Rob and Jenny plan to do with their free morning?

2 - Why can't Jenny go cycling right away?

3 - What solution does Rob suggest for Jenny's problem?

4 - Who calls Rob during the conversation?

5 - What does Daniel ask Rob to do?

6 - Why can't Rob do the interview on Monday?

7 - Where will Rob and Jenny meet later?

8 - What time will they meet?

9 - How does Jenny feel about Rob's work interruption?

10 - Does Jenny know how to find the meeting place? How?

Full Name _____

READING COMPREHENSION

Spending the Morning in London

London mornings are full of life. In many parks, people go running, walking dogs, or cycling to start the day. Some tourists like to explore the city on rented bicycles, passing famous landmarks like the London Eye, Tower Bridge, and the South Bank.

Many cafes open early, and the smell of fresh coffee and baked goods fills the streets. Commuters hurry to work, while street performers entertain early visitors near bridges and public squares. Even on busy streets, it is easy to find bike lanes or walking paths to enjoy the city safely.

For those who want to enjoy art or culture, museums and galleries often open in the morning. The Tate Modern, the British Museum, and other galleries welcome visitors who prefer to start their day surrounded by creativity. Maps, signs, and mobile apps help both tourists and locals navigate London efficiently.

A morning in London can be active, relaxing, or educational. People choose how to spend their time depending on their interests. Some enjoy cycling through the parks, others like sitting in a café watching the city wake up, and some like visiting a museum or gallery before it becomes crowded.

No matter the activity, mornings in London offer a chance to enjoy the city's energy, beauty, and culture before the day becomes busy.

Comprehension Questions

1. What activities do people do in London parks in the morning?

2. Name two landmarks that tourists might see while cycling.

3. What options do people have if they want to enjoy art or culture in the morning?

4. What is your favorite activity when visiting a city?

5. Do you prefer exploring a city by walking or by bike? Why?
