SCRIPT: COFFEE WITH MONICA

Monica: Jenny, how are you? You look great.

Jenny: Thanks, you look really good too. Hey, why don't we get some coffee?

Monica: I'd love to but I'm on my way to meet... Oh, come on, five minutes.

Jenny: So how is everything?

Monica: Oh great, things couldn't be better actually. Scott and I, we're getting married.

Jenny: You're what? Oh, congratulations, thank you. When did you get engaged?

Monica: Only a few days ago. I'm glad I saw you actually; I was gonna call you. We've only told family so far.

Jenny: I can't believe it, Monica the wife and to think you used to go clubbing every night.

Monica: That was a few years ago... All I want to do now is stay in and read wedding magazines.

Jenny: And how are the plans coming along?

Monica: I haven't done anything yet. My mom and Scott's mom want to organize the whole thing themselves.

Jenny: That's what mothers are for.

Monica: True. But what about you? You look fantastic.

Jenny: Well I guess I'm kind of happy too.

Monica: What's his name?

Jenny: Rob

Monica: You've been keeping him very quiet. Is it serious?

Jenny: It's kind of... You know...

Monica: So it is.

Jenny: it's still early. We haven't been together for long. He only moved here a few months ago from London.

Monica: What? He's British? And you think you can persuade him to stay in New York? That won't be easy.

Jenny: I think he likes it here, you know how guys are. You never know what they're thinking
