

LISTENING
#25Teacher's Guide*SCRIPT: A SMOOTH MEETING

Shaun: Now, we already have the go-ahead from Lyanna, but I'd like to get your input before we finalize anything. So, what does everybody think? Thiago, you're our tech guru. What are your thoughts on this?

Thiago: Will we have time for it?

Shaun: Okay. It's a fair point. We'll figure out a way to fit it into your schedules. Any other thoughts?

Jasmine: We're not trained coaches. Are we qualified to be doing this?

Shaun: Hmm. I take your point. How about we arrange some kind of training for you? Just the basics. It shouldn't be too hard.

Shaun: Mike, you haven't said anything so far. I'd like to hear what you think.

Mike: Why don't we call it tech assistance instead of coaching? It sounds more informal, more comfortable.

Shaun: Hmm, you may have a point. Jasmine, what do you think of Mike's idea?

Jasmine: I like it. Tech assistance. It sounds fun.

Shaun: It will be!

Shaun: Does anyone have anything else they'd like to add before we move on?

Ethan: If we're going to be coaching the directors, maybe they could coach us too. They could teach us a lot about the business.

Jasmine: That's a great idea. We're helping them. They're helping us.

Shaun: Okay, I'll mention it to Lyanna. Right. Well, thanks for your input, everybody. Now, we just have to decide which directors you're working with. Graham? Anybody?

Audio Comprehension Questions:

1. b) The Permission
2. b) To make final decisions together
3. The lack of time
4. He says they will make time for it
5. a) They're not trained coaches
6. Organizing basic training
7. Tech assistance
8. They could let the directors coach them as well.
9. a) Which directors to work with

Reading Comprehension Questions

1. To improve teamwork through skill sharing
2. The word "coaching" sounded formal
3. The office became more open, friendly, and cooperative.

Idioms

"Take your point" = understand and accept someone's opinion

Shaun says: "I take your point."

"You may have a point" = admit someone's idea might be right

Shaun says: "Hmm, you may have a point."

"Close the gap" = reduce differences between people or groups