

LISTENING

#30

1 – Listen to a group of colleagues welcoming a new employee. Pay attention to where they lived before, what they did in Tokyo, and how the CEO reacts to meeting the new team member.

First Impressions

1 - What do the man and woman realize they have in common?

- a) They worked at the same company
- b) They both used to live in Japan
- c) They studied together in Tokio

2 - How long does the woman say she lived in Japan?

3 - What does the man say he did while living in Tokyo?

4 - What does the man say he liked best about his time in Tokyo?

5 - How does Ms. Scott want Beata to address her?

- a) Ms. Scott
- b) Jessica
- c) Director Scott

6 - What does Jessica say about the team Beata will be joining?

- a) They are still learning their roles
- b) They really know their stuff
- c) They will need special training

7 - What does “keen” most closely mean when Beata says she is “very keen to learn even more here”?

- a) Not very interested
- b) Very interested / enthusiastic
- c) Tired of learning

8 - What does Jessica suggest they do in a couple of weeks?

Full Name _____

READING COMPREHENSION

New International Employees

When companies hire new employees from different countries, they often prepare a short onboarding period to help them adjust to the work culture. At NexaTech Solutions, this process is taken very seriously. Every month, the company welcomes several new team members who have lived and worked abroad, and each one brings a unique story.

Last month, the onboarding team met Lina, a software designer who had recently returned from three years in Seoul. She talked about the fast-paced work environment she experienced there, the long office hours, and the strong team spirit people shared. She said she wanted to bring some of that teamwork energy to her new department. The managers were happy to hear that, especially because NexaTech is trying to build a more collaborative atmosphere.

Another new employee, Mark, joined the marketing team after spending time in Toronto. He explained that his previous workplace encouraged open communication, and he felt comfortable giving feedback to his managers. In his opinion, clear communication helped teams avoid misunderstandings and build trust. His new colleagues at NexaTech were curious to know how they could improve their own communication habits.

During the same onboarding week, the HR department organized a welcome meeting with the company's director. She spoke about the importance of adapting to different workplace cultures and encouraged everyone to share their international experiences. She also reminded the group that every company has its own way of doing things, and learning those expectations is an important step in starting a new job.

Comprehension Questions

1 - Why does NexaTech take onboarding seriously?

2 - What positive quality did Lina want to bring to her new department?

3 - What communication habit did Mark value at his previous workplace?

4 - Do you think it is important for companies to learn about different work cultures? Why or why not?

5 - Have you ever joined a new team or group in your workplace? How did you adapt?
