A Busy Weekend

Liam had been looking forward to the weekend all week. He wanted to spend time with his friends, relax, and finally watch a new action movie that had just been released. However, when Saturday arrived, he realized he had more responsibilities than he expected.

His parents reminded him that he had promised to help clean the backyard. There were fallen branches, old boxes, and gardening tools scattered around. Liam hoped the job would only take an hour, but it ended up taking most of the morning.

In the afternoon, he planned to meet his friends at a shopping center. Just as he was getting ready to leave, he remembered that he still had homework to finish. His history teacher had assigned a report that was due on Monday. Liam considered leaving it for later, but he knew that would only cause stress on Sunday night.

After finishing his homework, he finally met his friends. They walked around the shopping center, had something to eat, and talked about school and sports. One of his friends suggested seeing the new movie that evening.

Liam liked the idea, but he checked with his parents first. They agreed, as long as he returned home before midnight. The movie was entertaining, and everyone had a great time.

By the end of the weekend, Liam felt tired but satisfied. He had completed his responsibilities, spent time with friends, and still found time to relax. He realized that good planning helped him enjoy his free time without neglecting his obligations.
