READING COMPREHENSION

An Unexpected Shopping Trip

Oliver only needed a few things from the supermarket: bread, milk, fruit, and coffee. He even made a shopping list before leaving home because he wanted to save money and avoid buying unnecessary items.

Everything went according to plan at first. He quickly found the bread and milk and headed to the fruit section. On the way there, however, he noticed a special promotion on kitchen appliances. A coffee machine caught his attention. He did not need a new one, but the price seemed too good to ignore.

A few minutes later, he found himself looking at sports equipment. There was a set of dumbbells on sale and a yoga mat that promised to make exercising at home easier. Oliver had not exercised in months, but suddenly he felt inspired to start a healthier lifestyle.

As he continued shopping, he added frozen pizzas, potato chips, ice cream, and several snacks to his cart. By the time he reached the checkout, his cart looked very different from the list he had written earlier.

When he got home, his sister looked at the groceries and laughed.

"Where's the fruit?" she asked.

Oliver stood silently for a moment.

He had remembered the coffee machine, the snacks, and the exercise equipment, but he had completely forgotten the fruit.

The next morning, he returned to the supermarket with the same shopping list and one new rule: never shop when you're hungry.
